General Comment

I believe that government rules and regulations should be written in a secular manner and should not be patterned after any religious beliefs. If these laws remain secular then, it is up to each individual to chose according to his/her moral code or religious teachings. If religious beliefs are written into the rules/regs, etc. then individuals are forced to subscribe to beliefs that may not be in accord with their thinking or moral code. Let's keep the health issues secular and allow folks to make their own choices. This pertains to reproductive rights such as contraceptives without charging a co-payment
